Where will you find savings for your company?

Financial leaders are always looking for areas to cut costs, so they can improve the bottom line. Often, the choices are tough and the problems complicated to fix. But sometimes, inefficiencies are hiding in plain sight.

Your T&E line item is a great place to look.

T&E is a complex, ongoing area of spending that's difficult to track. With an average of 10% of the business budget devoted to T&E, that spending is low-hanging fruit when it comes to managing expenses—and unlocking savings.

The impact can be sizable.

From avoiding errors to tax advantages to productivity gains, managing your T&E better can mean significant cost-savings and a stronger bottom line—month after month, year after year.

Here are six ways to uncover savings where you may not be looking.

1

STOP OVERSPENDING
ON ERRORS.

Stop overspending on errors.

Are your workers manually entering and itemizing expenses? That process is asking for mistakes, and mistakes cost money. According to a 2015 Oversight Systems study, one in every 10 travelers submits at least one duplicate expense in error, with that error costing an average of $50.

A T&E system that automatically populates charges from suppliers, credit card companies and receipts can lower the risk of missed or incorrectly entered expenses. That kind of accuracy adds up to real savings.

And accuracy is only the beginning. When expense reports get done faster, you can pay your corporate card bills sooner, leading to bigger rebates and better control of cash flow.

Cut out the management time.

Extra steps take extra time. And the traditional T&E process is full of steps.

Requesting travel, booking reservations, authorizing travel, tracking receipts, completing expense reports, and approving expense reports. These administrative burdens lower productivity and lengthen processing time, which takes a toll on your business.

But if you can automate the entire T&E process so every step takes just a few clicks or even takes care of itself, you can see productivity gains and measurable savings.

Concur gives managers, approvers and your finance team all the information they need to quickly review and approve expense reports, so they don't waste time sifting through receipts and double-checking charges.

“For preparers, we saw we could easily save five minutes in processing time, start to finish, and for approvers, two minutes, minimum. It's about $2 million annually, and it's an ongoing savings for our company.”

Get control of your mobile spending.

Employees can quickly accumulate mobile roaming charges when traveling. These costs are rarely accounted for in budgets, so they deliver unpleasant surprises to the bottom line. If you aren't managing your mobile contracts correctly, you could be over-paying by as much as 30% per device.

You can use your travel data to identify and prevent these costs before they occur.

Spot savings without increasing your overhead.

Your T&E policies are in place for a range of reasons: from avoiding costly errors and ensuring policy compliance to preventing fraud. Relying on your own personnel and outdated technology, such as paper or scanned receipts, to monitor and audit expenses can be costly and put your business at risk.

Use request tools to stop bad spending before it happens, and consider outside auditors trained to identify problems and mitigate fraud risks early in the process. That frees your team to focus on managing the budget instead of wrangling the process.

4 SPOT SAVINGS WITHOUT INCREASING YOUR OVERHEAD.

Reduce tax costs and increase reclamation.

Employee travel has lots of tax implications, from payroll tax liabilities to value-added-tax (VAT) on international purchases. Some of these taxes can be controlled and reclaimed, but only if you know the rules and have the right tools.

Targeted apps are out there to help you address this type of spending and automatically track payroll tax liabilities as well as VAT expenses—so you pay only what you have to and recover everything you can. One company saw $2.5 million in VAT savings after tracking for just one year.
